Preface

The YES-CEDICT Chinese Dictionary (一二三汉英大词典|一二三漢英大詞典) is designed for international learners. Chinese native students will find it helpful in English learning as well. There are altogether 114,300 word entries (including 15,103 single-character words), covering the following (except a small number of characters not displayable on the computer):

- All the 5,000 words of the new word list of HSK (新汉语水平考试词汇表, <http://www.chinesetest.cn/go-download.do>, Mainland, 2012);
- All the 8,000 words of the new word list of TOCFL (Test of Chinese as a Foreign Language, <http://www.tw.org/tocfl/>, Taiwan, 2013);
- All 112,178 headwords in CC-CEDICT (downloaded from the official Web site at <http://www.mdbg.net/chindict/chindict.php?page=cedict> on January 31, 2015);
- All 11,408 characters in the Complete List of Chinese Characters Used by the Media in 2013 (2013 年度媒体用字总表, National Language Commission of China 国家语委, 2014);
- All 13,000 plus characters in the latest version of Xinhua Zidian (新华字典, v11, 2011);
- All 13,000 plus characters in the latest version of Xiandai Hanyu Cidian (现代汉语词典, v6, 2012);
- First characters of all the headwords in the present dictionary.

The information of each headword is presented in the format of an entry, with 10 fields for mono-character words and 8 fields for multi-character words, for example

爱 (愛) ài [oi3] /to love /affection /to be fond of /to like / HSK1 TOCFL 入門級 FO323 U7231(U611B)
Stroke(s)10(13) (in S version)
愛 (愛) ài [oi3] /to love /affection /to be fond of /to like / HSK1 TOCFL 入門級 FO323 U611B(U7231)
Stroke(s)13(10) (in T version)
学生 (學生) xuésheng [hok6sang1] /student /schoolchild / HSK1 TOCFL 入門級 FO148
學生 (學生) xuésheng [hok6sang1] /student /schoolchild / HSK1 TOCFL 入門級 FO148

Each entry starts with the simplified form (in S version) or traditional form (in T version) of the headword, followed by the other form in brackets if the two forms are different. The third and fourth fields are Putonghua Pinyin and Cantonese Jyutping in square brackets. In addition to representing sound, Pinyin and Jyutping can be used to input the Chinese word into a computer or to look it up in a dictionary. The fifth field is the English definition (mostly from CC-CEDICT). The number of strokes appears at the end of the entry of a single-character word. If the character has different forms in simplified and traditional Chinese, then both stroke numbers are presented. The other fields are marked by capital letters with the follow meanings:

HSK: HSK level (1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6) of a headword which also appears in the HSK word list.

TOCFL: TOCFL level (入門級, 基礎級, 進階級, 高階級, 流利級) of a headword appearing in the TOCFL word list.

To make the dictionary more compact, words appearing more than once at different levels in the TOCFL list appears only once in the dictionary with the earliest level. For example, 愛 ài appears twice at 入門級 and 進階級 in the list, and only appears once marked with level 入門級 in the dictionary.

FO: Frequency Order number in the List of Frequently-used Words of Modern Chinese (现代汉语常用词表 (草案), http://www.moe.gov.cn/publicfiles/business/htmlfiles/moe/moe_1668/200812/43211.html, Mainland).

U: Unicode for simplified and traditional characters. You can type the hexadecimal Unicode on MS Word and press Alt+X to input the Chinese character on the computer.

At the present state, all word entries in the dictionary have contents for Simplified Chinese, Traditional Chinese and Putonghua Pinyin. About 79% of the words have been annotated with Jyutping, and 99% of them have English definitions. The raw data of Jyutping came from the dictionary of Allbalanced Chinese Input System (<http://www.mypolyuweb.hk/~ctxzhang/AB2007B/>) and Cantonese CEDICT (<http://writecantonese8.wordpress.com/2012/02/04/cantonese-cedict-project/>), with a small number added in manually by the editors based on the UniHan database (<http://www.unicode.org/charts/unihanrsindex.html>) and some other online Chinese dictionaries.

At the end of the dictionary, there are eight appendices, including Standard (New) and Variant (Old) Forms of Chinese Characters, Rules of Stroke Order, Stroke Order of Chinese Character Components, Components with Different Stroke Orders between Mainland and Taiwan, The Pinyin Scheme, The Jyutping Scheme, Province-Level Divisions of China and Pinyin-Stroke Order Index.

There are two versions of this dictionary. Version S is sorted by the simplified form of the headwords. To enable look-up by traditional Chinese as well, traditional characters different from their simplified counterparts are added to the dictionary and sorted as independent entries, pointing to the simplified characters and words beginning with them. Similarly, Version T is sorted by the traditional forms of the headwords. Simplified characters in different forms are added in and sorted as independent entries, cross referencing to the word entries beginning with traditional characters. The T and S versions are marked on the front page of the dictionary.

According to our survey, YES-CEDICT Chinese Dictionary is one of the seven Chinese-English dictionaries with over 100,000 word entries. The others are CC CEDICT (MDBG, 1997 -), New Age Chinese-English Dictionary (Wu and Cheng, 2001), ABC Chinese-English Comprehensive Dictionary (DeFrancis, 2003), A New Century Chinese-English Dictionary (Hui, 2003), The Chinese-English Dictionary (Wu, 2010) and the Oxford Chinese Dictionary (Kleeman and Yu, 2010). Among these big seven, only YES-CEDICT provides information of Cantonese pronunciation, frequency of use, levels of HSK and TOCFL, Unicode and stroke numbers.

Entries in the main text of this dictionary are arranged in YES order. To help readers unsure of the standard stroke order of some Chinese characters, a Pinyin-stroke order index is provided for all single-character words in the dictionary. Details of the YES Chinese Sorting Method can be found in the next section.

The YES Chinese Sorting Method

1. Arranging Chinese in YES order is similar to arranging English in alphabetic order, if we consider the stroke sequence of a Chinese character as the letter sequence of an English word. Two Chinese characters are sorted by their first stroke positions in the stroke alphabet. If the first strokes are the same, then check the second strokes, and so on. For example, the different characters in 一二三排检法|一二三排檢法 (the YES Sorting Method) are sorted as:

一 (一)
二 (一一)
三 (一一一)
檢 (一 | 丿、丿 \ 一 | 冂 一 | 冂 一 丿、丿、)
检 (一 | 丿、丿 \ 一、、丿一)
排 (一 丿 丿 | 一一一 | 一一一)
法 (、、 丿 | 一 丿、)

2. In the rare cases with more than one glyph or stroke order for a Chinese character, YES follows the standards of 现代汉语通用字笔顺规范, GB13000.1字符集汉字笔顺规范 and 通用规范汉字表 issued by the National Language Commission of China.
3. Words of multiple characters are sorted by their first characters in YES order. If the first characters are the same, then check the second characters, and so on. Non-Chinese characters appear after Chinese characters in alphabetical/Unicode order. For example,

覺
覺醒
觉
觉醒
觉悟
B超
T恤.

4. The stroke alphabet is based on the standards of GB13000.1字符集汉字折笔规范 and the Unicode CJK Strokes (<http://www.unicode.org/charts/PDF/U31C0.pdf>). There are totally 30 strokes, sorted by the standard basic strokes order of “横 (一) 提 (乚) 竖 (丨) 撇 (丿) 点 (丶) 捺 (㇇)” and bending points order of “折弯 钩”.
5. The Chinese name of the Sorting Method, i.e. 一二三, are the first three Chinese characters in YES order. The English name YES is the abbreviation of Pinyin “Yi Er San” of 一二三.
